

Nathan Kagina's HIV/AIDS Cure Testimonial
Feb. 10, 06

A few weeks ago my good friend and coworker in Uganda, Dr Rushidie Kayiwa, emailed to say that a fellow had gone on national TV to say some nice things about our zappers and the Doc was pretty excited about it. He mentioned the name but I forgot to write it down.

A week later, Nathan emailed me to ask about ordering one of our Terminator zappers and the name seemed pretty familiar, so I asked him if he was the man who was promoting our zappers in the media. Note the striking 'before and after' photos of Nathan, by the way.

Here's what he said:

Hello,

Yes, I am Nathan Kagina and I did promote the Terminator on National T.V., Radio, and Newspapers.

The response and requests for more information and availability is overwhelming.

Uganda has a population of about 30 million people and 20% are now living with HIV/AIDS and need this treatment.

The government chemist, Ministry of Health, Dr. Grace Nambatya Kyeyune has now included the ZAPPER for HIV treatment in Uganda, officially, on the basis of my own research, testimony and case study.

The Zapper is amazingly the most important scientific discovery since the Atomic Bomb but based on laws of magnetism.

In just six months of using the Zapper my viral load fell from millions per sample to an undetectable level.

This is bad news for the drug cartel and good news for millions living with HIV/AIDS, worldwide.

Thank you for your quick response and for your offer to give me a couple of Terminators.

Attached, find photos taken on the point of death (a memory photo with my wife and children) then the second photograph, after recovery.

Thank you DON for saving my life!

Kind regards,

Mr Nathan Kagina

Doc Kayiwa lately told me that 'Secret Supporter,' who was our host in Kampala during our stay in Uganda, had asked the Doc to come meet Nathan in his office and to give him one of our zappers. I wish I could tell you what our supporter's positions in Uganda were and are ;-)

'Secret Supporter' has been an avid reader of 'The Adventures of Don and Carol Croft' and told Dr K, whom I had been corresponding with, that he wanted to meet Carol and I, so the Doc invited us to come visit. I'd been regularly sending the Doc and our sponsor Terminators, which they had been handing out to Ugandan leaders and government officials who were ill. The real news in this world is seldom mentioned in the press or media until long after the fact, of course, and it should be considered a miracle whenever any genuine, empowering news like Nathan's testimonial breaks in the media.

When Dr K met him Nathan was quite close to dying, as he mentions in his note.

'Secret Supporter' has stuck his neck out to promote this in officialdom and to foster the early distribution of organite cloudbusters in Uganda and surrounding regions, by the way.

When I asked him whether I could mention his name in my subsequent reports he declined and said, 'Just call me Secret Supporter.' Everyone loves a mystery, no? This very reputable, distinguished and accomplished elderly gentleman whisked Georg Ritschl (<http://www.orgonise-africa.net>) and I past customs when we arrived in Uganda in November, 2003, which felt nice, and he provided transportation for the extended organite distribution sorties throughout the country for Georg, Dr K, Dr Paul Batiibwe and myself. He also personally took Georg and I, with a new cloudbuster, to his gorgeous home province in a far corner of Uganda.

Carol couldn't make it to Africa, that time, but she's the first person to take zappers to Africa for use in a clinical situation—that time in Western Kenya in September, 2001. We gave out some little solar powered crowd zappers to some fascinating and appreciative Xhosa traditional healers in Namibia after a demonstration a year or so later. We were in Namibia to initiate the distribution of cloudbusters in the Namib Desert, which has been steadily progressing, largely through the sustained efforts of Georg Ritschl.

I share the view of many that progress in Africa may be slower in some ways than elsewhere but it's steady and unstoppable once the Africans have taken something useful to heart. I like the analogy that European civilization is like a small wheel that spins very fast and lacks momentum but African culture is like a larger wheel that spins more slowly but has more momentum.

Winston Churchill, who arguably represented the pillage and plunder of East Africa at the time, called Uganda, 'The Pearl of Africa.'

I've also maintained, as have many others, that Uganda is the most progressive country on the continent. I certainly feel vindicated by the present development because in my own country all of the zapper innovators except Carol and I have been driven out of business or imprisoned by the government. The medical/drug cartel are conducting a fear campaign about them in the UK, Canada and USA and we're lately having some difficulty with government agents in the US and Canada interfering with our zapper shipments to distributors.

My other claim for Africans (the noble race), that they will lead humanity to the sane stage of civilization, might be vindicated before long, too, because Dr Kayiwa has pledged to distribute zappers and organite throughout East and Central Africa. He's definitely a man of his word. It's possible because the people there, unlike here, are quite receptive to progressive concepts and technology. He's already made inroads in Uganda, Sudan and Congo and he has the active support of the Buganda King, an honored cultural figure in East Africa. Watch this man!

Another exclusive sign of progress in Uganda is that there is growing support there for the establishment of a medical school based on traditional naturopathy/homeopathy, as taught by Dr William von Peters (<http://www.uncurable.com>), and allopathy, which will always have uses. Land has been donated and construction has begun, in fact, under 'Secret Supporter's' auspices and Dr von Peters has visited Uganda and was also hosted by this remarkable man, by the way.

The funny part of this development is that, now that the zapper has been promoted in the media, the top government people want their own zappers all of a sudden: Doc K told me that President Musaveni's brother and the Finance Minister want two, each.

Dr Yahya Sekagye, whom I was privileged to meet has pioneered a coordinated, grassroot effort across equatorial Africa in which traditional herbalists have been pooling their knowledge and information with a view to extensive research, standardization and marketing. Drs Batiibwe and Kayiwa took me along when they attended one of the society's award ceremonies.

We toured the experimental gardens that Dr S had sponsored on his own land and it was encouraging and refreshing for me to witness the competence and networking among those herbalists and traditional healers, some of whom had traveled quite a distance to spend the day there. Dr Sekagye, who is a gem, subsequently cured his malaria in a few days with one of our basic zappers. Malaria is more widespread in some areas than HIV/AIDS is.

[I shared the news with Dr von Peters (the 'Ethereic Conquistador of Chattanooga,' by the way--an avid gifter 8) and here's his response:]

Hello Don:

That is wonderful! It is obvious that they haven't been sprayed like we have here, in that his immune system was able to function after the zapper removed enough of the viral load. That gives me an idea for a new product, specifically for viral load. I'll let you know after I think about it more.

Good article! Thanks for the plug. I hope they can come through with the letters and we can get the funding to go over and really get the things going with the school and healing. The zapper is a great lead-in, not to mention doing a lot of good by itself.

Dr. K was pointing out while I was there that what I have to offer is cutting edge natural medicine, which when combined with native herbals has the ability to offer a sustainable true healing system that won't bankrupt the country like the pharmaceuticals. And, it actually heals people instead of just palliating them while taking their money.

You know it is said that the average American now dies with an estate of less than $10,000 because the medical system (hospitals, doctors and drug companies) suck up everything they have, including their house, in the last 3 months before they die.

I'm afraid that within a few years we will see natural medicine outlawed again. In this regard I have been working on something the past few months that can be spread as a grass roots movement. I'll let you know more when I get it put together a bit better.

God bless,
Doc

I lately requested some personal information from Nathan, which follows [-D]:

I was born in 1957 in the Mbarara District of Uganda. I am of the Munyankole tribe, which is Bantu in origin.

I'm a teacher by profession, currently studying for a diploma in counseling/psychotherapy.

I'm a member of the Kampala Pentacostal Church.

I'm also the executive director of a small, non-governmental organization, called Ngoma Community Care Initiative, in Ntungamo, Mbarara. We offer counseling services, care and guidance to HIV patients and their families.

The life of this Initiative depends solely on voluntary contributions from members, friends and well-wishers.

My favorite presentation, 'Living Positively With AIDS,' attracts large crowds but we are often incapacitated by insufficient funds to cover our travel expenses.

I gave my story to a British Broadcasting Corporation reporter who had offered to broadcast it but she opted not to do to it, apparently because I was praising your zapper.

I'm delighted, though, that my testimony will reach worldwide because of your efforts on the internet, Don!

For me, Nathan's public testimony is the breach in the dam of generations of heavy brainwashing by the medical/drug cartel. This pioneer is the first to broadcast the news in the major media about this inexpensive cure for serious illnesses and I believe we're seeing the beginning of a genuine global prairie fire of empowerment in terms from freeing humanity from disease forever.

The lesser victory will be the collapse of the parasitic global medical/drug cartel from lack of public support. When it becomes clear to everyone that serious sicknesses can be quickly cured with a battery and a cheap circuit why would anyone go to an MD for anything but trauma care?

Below are a list of sources, worldwide, for inexpensive, basic zappers. These are people who have earned our respect and confidence, by the way:

Andy in Los Angeles of <http://www.ctbusters.com>

Georg in South Africa at <http://www.orgonise-africa.net>

Alexandre in La Belle Province at <http://www.quebecorgone.com>

John in UK at <http://www.whale.to>

Francois in Australia at <http://www.orgoneaustralia.com.au/>

Markus in Switzerland at organizer@goalternatif.com

Before long, Dr Rushidie Kayiwa will be manufacturing basic zappers in Uganda for distribution through his fast-growing, grassroots East and Central Africa networks. This, too, represents a victory in that Africans will be actively providing and distributing the means for the utter end of tropical illnesses. AIDS, a late arrival, is only one of the mass killers in Africa, by the way.

When the Chinese come along, a little later, with five dollar zappers they'll need to rely on whatever network the African pioneers will have established and in that case everyone will win. Carol and I are already benefiting tremendously from the internet publicity, of course.

Curing disease doesn't guarantee health, by the way. Dr Rudi Verspoor in Ottawa, Canada, of homeopathy.com, who combines the work of Drs Hahnemann and Reich in a unique, dynamic approach to healing, which he calls 'Heilkunst,' ('the art of healing') laid that out for me a couple of summers ago when I visited with him.

Quickly and cheaply curing aggressive acute tropical diseases, such as the African version of AIDS, malaria, Dengue fever, yellow fever, dysentery, etc., guarantees that the sufferers in tropical third world nations will have a chance to survive and heal, though, and many traditional healers, though not well-equipped to handle the newer endemics brought on by colonization, etc., are at least able to help the recovery process significantly and they'll want to have zappers, too.

There will always be a place of honor for skilled, appropriately-trained and experienced physicians like our friends who are gifted with an ability to induce the body to heal itself.

By the way, another MD, Dr Paul Batiibwe, also of Uganda, was the first to do controlled studies of the effects of zappers. He was also the first Black African to build an orgonite cloudbuster. In the Kiboga District Hospital, which he directs, the physicians use zappers, colloidal silver and ozone in their protocols. As far as I know, that's the first hospital on the planet where this has taken place.

I bet you can imagine how much grief Dr Paul gets from the World Health Organization, who parcel out 'free' pharmaceuticals to rural hospitals in an effort to persuade them to follow the ruinous drug cartel's costly but worthless 'party line.'

Dr Kayiwa and his frequent travel companion, Kizira Ibrahim, who is a traditional healer, emptied a couple of hospitals in Northern Uganda last fall by simply distributing small orgonite devices to the patients, who suddenly felt well, so went home. This is more likely to happen in Africa than here, by the way, because the people there are more intimately acquainted with and appreciative of the dynamics of subtle energy, which is to say, 'magic.'

Can it get any better than this?
